China government crisis management

成果

I did interview with local government officials from different level in government. Seven are from the county (县) level, Five are from the city(市) level, Three are from the provincial(省) level. I also interviewed two officials from the Ministry of National Security (国家安全部)。

My interview included two parts. In the first part, I took the unstructured interviewing, I asked the officials with one issue: government crisis management. It is open discussion. The purpose is to listen their opinion and main view on this issue. In this part, they mentioned local government just care about the higher government' s evaluation , it is responsible for higher government. When facing crisis, the first thing they want to do is to cover the facts. They don' t want to make the crisis a big news. They usually tell the truth only when the crisis is managed or they can' t handle the crisis.

In second part of interview, I took the semi-structured interview. Based on first part of interview, I asked them three questions:1. Do you think the emergency management law can be efficient? 2. what is the main factor to influence government response to crisis management effectively?

According to question 1, all officials think the law is useful but the efficiency is in doubt. The reason is the law is just the law. How to carry out is a big problem. About question 2, fifteen officials think the main factor is government did not tell the truth to public openly and make the crisis management effectively. Two officials think the main factor is the government did not have good ways.

I went to the Beijing Library, Beijing University library and main academic bookstores, collected literature and books on this issue.
